AN ADDRESS

To the inhabitants of Bridgewater, Massachusetts, New England, America, from the residents in Bridgewater, Somersetshire, England.

SEPTEMBER, 1846.

DEAR BRETHREN:—

WE rejoice that the disputes, which seemed to threaten collision between our respective nations, are amicably settled; and that the ocean which divides us is not traversed by hostile and destructive fleets, but bears upon it those gifts of nature and products of toil, by which life is prolonged and sweetened. We hope that extended intercourse will unite us more closely, as descendants from the same ancestors, speaking the same language, professing the same principles of liberty, and the same religion of love. We desire an interchange, not of commodities only, but of thoughts and affections, and, to show the sincerity of this wish, we are now induced to address you.

We deem it not improbable that, when your eyes rest on this paper, you will see familiar names; and that it was not without affection to many whom they left behind them here, that the founders of your town called it Bridgewater. We are happy that this name is not disgraced by being affixed to a residence of slaveholders, and that those who went from us made their abode in a land of justice and liberty.

You probably share our horror at a system by which millions of those whom God has made of one blood with ourselves are treated as mere chattels — the victims of lust and cruelty — kept in brutal ignorance in the midst of light and knowledge, heathens in a Christian land — slaves whose masters receive as "self-evident truths that all men are created equal — that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights — that, among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." But to our grief we learn that your republic supports an institution to the iniquity and infamy of which it would be an insult to your hearts and understandings to suppose you insensible — that whilst your State secretly offers a refuge to the fugitive, he does not become free by entering it, — that though you refuse your aid to the oppressor, you do not prevent him from snatching from your borders the man whom God gave him for a brother, not a slave — that, in too many cases, so far from denouncing his injustice, and awakening him to his guilt, you encourage him in his delusion that persons of color belong to an inferior race, which may be trodden in the dust, by withholding from those who reside among you the sympathy which the wrongs that have been inflicted on them would seem to demand, the equality which your free institutions would lead them to expect, and the social position to which their individual merits might entitle them.

As from this town, sixty-one years ago, the first petition was sent up to our legislature against the slave-trade, it seems not inappropriate that we should set the example of assuring your countrymen, through you, that we warmly sympathise with those who assert the rights of your colored population. As we know the deadening influence of habit, we think it possible that some among you may acquiesce in an evil which they know not how to cure. Let this voice from the Old World rouse you from your despondency, and be taken as a presage of the same good fortune which has attended the protracted labors of the friends of freedom in this land. From our common ancestors you received the institution of slavery, and also that spirit of liberty, which, among us, has led to its extinction; and so far from resting satisfied with our past triumphs, every year the desire in this country is growing stronger, to testify our abhorrence of slavery, wherever it exists, and our reprehension of all who countenance so grievous a crime.

You will see the signatures of men and women, parents and children, of persons of all grades of society, opposed to one another in politics, and differing in their religious creeds, but all united in an ardent desire that you should be among the honored instruments of delivering our brethren who are oppressed from the degradation of bondage, and our brethren who oppress them from the curse which this iniquity entails — of averting the horrors which may attend the longer infringement of those rights, which, as sure as there is a Providence, must at length be yielded — and of welcoming the colored race to the blessings of education, the rights of liberty, and the equal privileges of citizenship.

We trust that we shall receive from you the same sympathy in our efforts to raise the fallen, and to remedy the evils of the past, which is now tendered to you by

YOUR FRIENDS AND BRETHREN.

REPLY

Of the inhabitants of Bridgewater, Massachusetts, United States of North America, to an Address to them from the residents of Bridgewater, Somersetshire, England; under date of Sept.* 10, 1846.

BRIDGEWATER, FEB. 10, 1847.

DEAR BRETHREN: —

YOUR Epistle of the 10th of September, 1846, has been lately received. We have read it with joy. We cordially and sincerely reciprocate its benevolent sentiments, and kind wishes. We rejoice with you that our own nation, and yours, have escaped the imminent danger of an unnatural, unjustifiable, and ruinous war, by which our hands might have been imbrued in each other's blood. We rejoice in the confirmation of peace. Long may we enjoy its divine blessings, and long may our friendly intercourse be mutually agreeable and useful.

As you suppose, we do indeed recognize among the names of our inhabitants many of those borne on your letter. We presume that our forefathers, who first settled this town, and gave it a Christian name,* selected that of Bridgewater, as a memento of their affection for the town whence they came, and where they had left behind them brothers and sisters, near and dear friends, and the graves of their fathers.

* Including all that originally went by that name, and which is now divided into the four contiguous towns of North, West and East Bridgewater, and Bridgewater, (sometimes, but improperly called, South Bridgewater.)

Your blood flows in our veins. We speak the same language. We have drunk truth from the same pure fountains. We profess to believe in the same religion, and may its divine influence lead us both to the same devotion to duty.

We desire to seize the opportunity which is now afforded us by your favor, to learn more concerning our consanguinity, and feel more deeply the obligation of kindness, and in our intercourse with each other, whether in relation to friendship or business, prove that we descended from the same ancestors.

We learn with satisfaction that Bridgewater, (England,) presented the first petition to parliament against the slave-trade. We rejoice that your petition ultimately succeeded; — that the government of Great Britain, impelled by a high sense of duty, has, by her wisdom, energy, and untiring perseverance, effected so much towards terminating the abominable and nefarious traffic in our fellow men; a traffic marked with cruelty, injustice and depravity, not to be found elsewhere in the catalogue of crimes.

We are highly gratified, and trust in this we agree with all men everywhere who love liberty, justice and humanity, that Great Britain has put an end to slavery in her Colonies in the West Indies.

* The Indian name was Satucket.

The result, contrary to the predictions and maledictions of many, has proved most favorable to master and slave, and most cheering to the heart and hopes of the philanthropist.

These unfortunate slaves, freed from the galling yoke of bondage, and elevated to the rank of responsible beings, have proved to the world that they are MEN, capable of sustaining the high trust of liberty. May the noble example of Great Britain commend itself to all slaveholders and slave States, and may a sense both of duty and interest induce them to "go and do likewise."

With respect to our own position in relation to the existence of slavery in this Union, which occupies the chief part of your letter, we are inclined to think that the true nature of that position is not generally understood by foreigners.

Neither the governments of the free States, nor that of the United States, can constitutionally abolish slavery as it exists within the slaveholding States. We can act upon slavery in the slave States, only by moral means.

Beside the slave States, you are aware, that the nation has acquired, by cession from two slave States, a territory of ten miles square, called the District of Columbia, for the seat of government, and the Capitol of the Union. Many in the free States desire to abolish slavery in this District. Some think that we have not the power; and others again are discouraged from any further attempt, after so long an acquiescence has left but little prospect of success. For ourselves, we are free to confess that we regard the people of the free States as guilty in not having done what they might, and ought to have done, to secure the removal of slavery in this, and other portions of our beloved country, and we hope that we may hereafter more faithfully perform our duty.

From time to time, previous to the adoption of the Constitution by the United States, the then Colonies or States severally had adopted, or formed governments for themselves, which, with modifications and amendments, have continued to the present day — a majority thereof allowing and supporting slavery, while others do not tolerate, but absolutely disallow and forbid it. Hence some are denominated free States; others slave States. These States formed a union, or, as it was termed, a confederation for common defence, and for the attainment of Independence. When the Independence of the United States was acknowledged by the mother country, and peace was made, the objects of the confederation were accomplished, and that was dissolved.

Experience, however, in the course of five or six years, taught the people, that a Union of the States, and a National Government, were absolutely indispensable to the peace and prosperity of each and all of the States. The free States and the slave States were jealous of each other; and granted to the National Government, which they then formed, a portion of their power with caution, and to secure more effectually that reserved to themselves, it is expressly stipulated in the Constitution, — "That the powers not delegated to the United States by that Instrument, nor prohibited by the States, are reserved to the States, or to the people." This stipulation is thus a part of the Constitution itself, leaving slavery in the slave States in the hands, and under the exclusive power of the governments of those States. The several States are also authorized to contract debts on their own account, but as Massachusetts has no power to restrain or control other States, she does not feel herself, as a State, responsible for slavery or Repudiation.

We presume that this subject might be better understood by you, by a reference to your own government. We refer to your home and colonial government; and, as you are pleased to say, "we trust that we shall receive from you the same sympathy in our efforts to raise the fallen, and remedy the evils of the past which is now tendered to you," we feel invited to express our opinion that great injustice, cruelty and oppression, are practised in the British Colonies, especially in the East Indies, and to express the hope that you and others engaged in the great work of improvement and reform, will not fail to use your efforts in the redemption of those oppressed men.

As you have dwelt so much upon the subject of slavery, allow us to repeat that we were highly gratified to learn that you were the first to raise the standard against the slave-trade sixty-one years ago. Will it be less gratifying to you to be informed, that sixty-six years ago, the people of Massachusetts, in their Constitution or Bill of Rights, declared that "All men are born free and equal, and have certain inalienable rights, among which may be reckoned the right of enjoying and defending their lives and liberties, &c." By virtue of this bill, or declaration of rights, the slaves of Massachusetts were emancipated;—

slavery in the State of Massachusetts ceased forever. Does history record any other act of governmental emancipation so early? Does history record any other act of emancipation made by the organic government, and approved by the vote of the people?

We deeply lament that slavery exists within the borders of our nation. We are well aware of its many and great evils, affecting the SLAVE and MASTER, in the States in which it exists, and that these evils in various ways reach us in the free States, as a part of the Union. A large majority in these States desire its entire abolition. We earnestly hope that by a more perfect union of the people here, and more decided action, we may be able to prevent the further extension of slave territory in this nation. And we look forward with earnest hope that the period is not distant, when, by the united efforts of the wise and good, under the guidance of Him who has said, "Undo the heavy burdens, and let the oppressed go free," slavery may cease forever to exist in this Union.

Allow us, in conclusion, to invite your attention to the bright side of the picture; our civil and religious liberty, Free Schools, Academies and Colleges, and many other forms of instruction; our numerous charitable institutions, well endowed and well managed; our industry, enterprise and prosperity. Such a view, we feel assured, will afford you pleasure.

With salutations of friendship, and prayers for your prosperity in every good word and work, and the hope that the intercourse thus happily commenced may long be continued, and blessed to our mutual happiness and welfare, we bid you farewell.

NOTE.

In January, 1847, a letter was received from the inhabitants of Bridgewater, England, addressed to those of Bridgewater, Mass., U. S. A., on the subjects of Peace and Slavery, and signed by about twelve hundred persons. Notice of the same was immediately given to the inhabitants of North, East, and West Bridgewater, as well as of Bridgewater, and a meeting was called at the Town Hall in the latter place on Wednesday, Jan. 27th, to take it into consideration.

Of this meeting, which was numerously attended, Hon. John Reed was chosen Chairman, and Rev. Claudius Bradford, Secretary.

The letter from England having been read, a Committee of the following persons, two from each town, was chosen to draft a reply to it, and present it at some future meeting:—

North Bridgewater, — Rev. Paul Couch and Hon. Jesse Perkins.

West Bridgewater, — Rev. Darius Forbes and Hon. John E. Howard.

East Bridgewater, — Rev. Baalis Sanford and Rev. Nathaniel Whitman.

Bridgewater, — Rev. David Brigham and Rev. Claudius Bradford.

To this Committee was added Hon. John Reed.

At an adjourned meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 10th, the Committee presented for the consideration of the meeting the preceding Reply, which, after a good deal of warm and animated discussion, was, with great unanimity, adopted. It was also voted that certain books and maps be procured and sent to England, to accompany the Reply.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY.

One volume allowed at a time, and obtained only by card; to be kept 14 days (or seven days in the case of fiction and juvenile books published within one year) without fine; not to be renewed; to be reclaimed by messenger after 21 days, who will collect 20 cents besides fine of 2 cents a day, including Sundays and holidays; not to be lent out of the borrower's household, and not to be transferred; to be returned at this Hall.

Borrowers finding this book mutilated or unwarrantably defaced, are expected to report it; and also any undue delay in the delivery of books.

No claim can be established because of the failure of any notice, to or from the Library, through the mail.

The record below must not be made or altered by borrower.
